4. Resolved, That the bill before the Congress of the United States, to raise the salaries of the officers of the navy, in some instances to a sum approximating to five thousand dollars, is a gross infraction on the rights of the poor, inasmuch as it provides, in its details, no corresponding rise in the wages of the subordinate officers, sailors, and marines, who perform all the labor, and in storm or sunshine are compelled to be at their post, and who, according to the strict principles of justice, ought to be remunerated for their services, so as to enable them to support themselves and families in a manner becoming those engaged in the service of their country.
